Platinum Partner

How can an evening of drinks, great food, and dancing help reduce the time to transplant? Because when we take the time to connect, face to face, person to person and something powerful happens: relationships form, and with them, trust.

In a world where our differences often feel louder than our common ground, moments like these let our shared passions shine through. Whether it's a love for stem cell work, a favourite holiday spot in France, raising two children, or enjoying musical theatre, these connections remind us that we're more alike than we think.

And when we truly connect, we care more deeply, not just about our own donors and patients, but about each other's. That's what builds a global community of commitment, where we all work faster, better, and together to save lives.
